

Skeenaview patients hit by higher costs

By GAIL DOTINGA
Herald Staff Writer

Skeenaview patients will pay close to $55 a month more starting July 1st.

The provincial ministry of health announced increases in the direct charges of several health services last month. Two of those services were long term and extended care, where the daily rate of $8.50 was raised to $8.50. The present rate works out to approximately $200 a month. After July 1st it'll be around $255.

Despite this increase, the executive director of Skeenaview, Gordon Galbraith, feels that the patients will be able to afford it.

"I'm not anticipating any problems, the Old Age Pension just went up to about $340 so they should be able to cope."

Patients receive room and board at Skeenaview. Although the majority of people staying at the lodge are elderly, there are a few that are younger. Most of them receive handicap pensions which enable them to meet the payments.

"If for some reason a person cannot make the payments then something can be worked out with human resources so that the bill is paid."

This is the first increase in the long term and extended care programs since it was first launched in January, 1978.

"The increase was necessary, all costs are going up for meals, rooms, everything. Also the government nurses just received a huge increase," said Galbraith.

The average cost for a patient each day is $65 at Skeenaview. Patients pay approximately 10 per cent of that with the provincial government subsidizing the rest.

Other increases will occur in acute care hospitals, where the daily cost to the patient for in-patient care will increase from the current $4 to $5.50 a day.

Day surgery charges will be going from $2 to $5 and medical plan premiums will increase about 15 per cent.

Lastly ambulance services will be raised to $19 for the first 40 kilometers plus 20 cents per kilometer thereafter to a maximum of $25.

According to the ministry, the increases effective July 1, will establish levels which will now be adjusted annually on the basis of fluctuations in the consumer price index.

CASAW wants short term

Bargaining is for more clout

By GAIL DOTINGA
Herald Staff Writer

The Canadian Association of Smelter and Allied Workers, Local 1, will be asking for a 31 per cent average wage increase over 20 months when their contract with Alcan expires next October.

If the union gets the contract they want, it'll mean workers earning the base rate of $8.74 an hour now will make $11.63 by July 1, 1982 when negotiations come up again. For tradesmen, their hourly wage will increase from the current $11.73 to $15.21.

The other major point in the union's proposal is the length of the contract. Previously it had been a three-year contract, now CASAW would like it to be shortened to 20 months, expiring at the same time as Arvida and other Alcan smelters in the east. Alcan would like to keep the contract expiry dates different so that in the event of a strike there is not a total shutdown of all their smelters. Also, because Alcan wages are often compared to those in forestry, the company would like to negotiate after forestry workers have made a settlement.

However, Ray Pegley, a union leader, does not see that as being a major obstacle in contract negotiations.

"Most unions ask for a one-year contract because of rising inflation," Pegley said. "We've compromised between that and the three year contract. If the price is right we're willing to negotiate."

Pegley said the union here wanted the common expiry date with the eastern smelters.

"The obvious reason is that it will give more weight to the union."

Another proposal in CASAW's rough draft of their wage package was a cost of living allowance to be adjusted every three months. The allowance will be derived from a formula of 1c per 2 per cent rise in the consumer price index, based on an eight per cent inflation rate, to be rolled into the hourly wage.

According to the union Alcan's good standing in terms of market conditions, aluminum prices and possible expansion indicate that this will be CASAW's year for a good contract.

"I'm very optimistic, the union itself is in real good shape, our committee is the best I've seen in recent years and we're ready well in advance," said Pegley.

The negotiating committee consists of Wilho Papenbrock, Ray Pegley, Ken Rutsatz, John Monterio, Arne Burnip, Ross Slezak and Jim Alderman. Alcan has not yet officially announced who is on their committee.

CASAW's contract with Alcan expires on October 24, 1980.

B.C. is backing away from coal deal

By ROGER SMITH
OTTAWA (CP) — British Columbia and the federal government reached a tentative agreement on financing rail lines to carry northeastern B.C. coal to port early today but a few hours later the province was having second thoughts.

Senator Ray Perrault, government leader in the Senate, said the deal reached after more than 10 hours of talks was put on hold when B.C. Economic Development Don Phillips said it must be discussed by provincial cabinet.

Phillips gave Perrault that message just as federal and provincial officials were sitting down to work out details of the broad deal the resulted from negotiations that lasted until 2 a.m. today.

The deal would finance building of new rail lines and upgrading of new ones to transport the northeastern coal which coal companies want to sell to Japan.

Perrault said at a news conference that the word to hold off on the deal came presumably from the office of B.C. Premier Bill Bennett. The B.C. cabinet is to meet Saturday to discuss the deal.

"We think we've reached some kind of agreement in principle," Senator Bud Olson, federal economic development minister, said after the talks ended.

"We need a little more time for officials to work out the details."

Don Phillips, Olson's counterpart in B.C., said he was satisfied with the progress but added there are still "a few wrinkles to iron out."

"I'm quite certain we'll be able to finalize a deal tomorrow (Friday)."

Representatives of Canadian National Railways and five coal companies attended the talks earlier in the day. But the two governments negotiated alone in the later hours.

The new rail lines must be financed and existing ones upgraded so the coal companies can calculate freight charges in the price they offer the Japanese companies.

The Japanese have given the Canadian companies until Sunday — a deadline already extended from the end of May — to offer a price for the annual sale of 5.3 million tonnes of metallurgical coal, worth at least $3.5 billion over 10 years. But Australia is also interested in making a deal with Japan.

The coal would move from Prince George along the CNR mainline, which will be upgraded at a cost of about $70 million, to Prince Rupert, where it will be loaded at a facility to be built at Ridley Island.

But the most important gap in the almost 1,000-kilometre trip to port is the railway from the coalfields to existing tracks near Prince George.

Phillips said B.C. has insisted on the more expensive Anzac route, which includes five tunnels that could lead to major cost overruns.

The minister said the present government would not tie the hands of future B.C. administrations by choosing a route that could interfere with future power developments.

Provincially-owned B.C. Rail estimated the cost of the 115-kilometre Anzac line at $215 million. CNR, which has been asked to build the line, has said the price would be at least $300 million but that is based on B.C. Rail data and surveying.

"As far as we're concerned, the engineering work hasn't even begun," said CNR president R. E. Lawless as he waited for the federal-provincial meeting.

Construction unions voting

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council has begun a strike vote among 45,000 construction workers in the province, council president Roy Gaudier said Thursday.

The mail vote, results of which won't be known for about three weeks, followed a breakdown in talks Wednesday between the council, representing 17 unions, and Construction Labor Relations Association, bargaining body for about 800 companies.

Talks broke down over wages and other issues, including a demand for a common affiliation clause that would allow them to refuse to work alongside non-affiliated unions.

The employers apparently are studying a union counter-offer, details of which were not revealed.

Union officials insist they will not break the tradition of B.C. construction workers getting the best agreement in Canada — highest settlement so far is a $3.04 an hour package of wage and benefits in a two-year contract recently approved by Alberta construction unions.

The B.C. unions want $3.50 an hour in a one-year package. Management has offered $3 an hour over two years on an average package rate of $15 an hour.

Gaudier said the employers' offer isn't good enough because there is resistance to union requests for a cost-of-living protection clause in the second year.

There have been more than 400 meetings between the two parties. No date has been set for a resumption of negotiations.

Gaudier said the affiliation clause will help the unions resist non-union and right-to-work contractors.

The building trades shut down work at the Duke Point industrial part near Nanaimo, B.C. for several months because International Woodworkers of America construction workers were building a sawmill at the site. The project resumed without resolution of the jurisdictional dispute.

CLRA president Chuck McVeigh said a common affiliation clause would make it possible for the unions to shut down any industrial, commercial or public project.

Gov't attacking union's charges

VANCOUVER (CP) — The papers this weekend, provincial government is fighting back against charges it is taking away their civil servants' pension security.

Advertisements explaining recent legislation making public employees' pensions will run in most B.C. daily newspapers this weekend, communications planning adviser David Brown said Thursday.

"The intent of the ads is to make clear what the government proposes to the civil servants and to the general public," he said. "We're laying out the salient facts of the proposed changes."

Doubters are meeting today

CHICAGO (AP) — It's Friday the 13th, which means the Anti-Superstition Society will be meeting today.

The agenda provides time for smashing mirrors, trampling four-leaf clovers and opening umbrellas indoors.

The society meets only on Fridays that fall on the 13th, and today's meeting at a fashionable downtown club is the only one this year.

"In 1981, there will be three Fridays the 13th — in February, March and November," said Les Lear, the society's executive vice-president.

The group was organized in 1930 by 13 members, including George Halas, owner of Chicago Bears of the National Football League. He and one of his former stars, Harold (Red) Grange, will be among 26 men honored today for their civic contributions.

Grange, who wore football jersey

No. 77, will be 77 years old today, and will talk to those at the meeting by telephone.

"The society tries to discourage belief in silly superstitions," Lear said.

There will be 13 black cats roaming about the room while the meeting is held from 4:15 to 6:15 p.m.

There are 313 members in the group.

CLOSURES

No fish this year

Poor runs predicted

VANCOUVER (CP) — The outlook for this year's salmon fishing season became bleaker Thursday as the federal fisheries department announced another commercial fishing closure.

Commercial sockeye salmon fishing in Rivers Inlet, on the mainland 400 kilometres northwest of Vancouver, will not open June 23 as scheduled because of indications there will be a poor run.

A fisheries spokesman said fishing will not be allowed until 750,000 salmon have made their way toward the spawning grounds. If the spawning escapement is less than 750,000, the fishery will not open at all this season.

The Rivers Inlet closure follows a sports and commercial fishing ban on chinook (spring) salmon in the Fraser River and southern part of the Georgia Strait.

Bill Otway, executive director of the B.C. Wildlife Federation, said he reluctantly supports the sports fishing ban in the Fraser River and southern Georgia Strait.

But a Fraser Valley anti-poverty group is protesting the closure on the grounds it will hurt pensioners, welfare recipients and other poor people who rely on fish for food.

Fisheries biologist Robin Harrison blamed the poor salmon runs this season on a variety of factors, but admitted fisheries is not sure which factors had the greatest effect.

Harrison said that in 1978, the year the salmon now leading up the river were hatched, there was an unusually low number of fish at the spawning grounds so the population was small from the beginning.

Fisheries confirms charges pending

By ROGER SMITH
OTTAWA (CP) — The Atlantic Provinces (Alcan) could face legal action unless the water flow over the Kenney Dam in northwestern British Columbia is not back to normal in a few days, the parliamentary secretary to Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc said Thursday.

George Henderson said in an interview that Alcan could be charged under the Fisheries Protection Act if it doesn't comply with a fisheries department request to double the water flow into the Nechako River.

Earlier, he said during Commons question period that water flow should soon be back to normal as a result of meetings between department and company officials.

"In the next few days, we will be making sure the water rate over the dam is back up to 1,000 cubic feet (a second)," Henderson said.

Volcano blows its top again

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens roared back to life overnight with its first eruption directed at a major population centre, prompting five Oregon counties to go on alert and forcing evacuations in the area around the volcano.

From the Portland, Ore., area southward through Oregon's Willamette Valley, nearly a million people were urged to stay indoors and to wear face masks if they left shelter.

Scientists said the blast Thursday night was the third major eruption in a month and could become the worst since May 18, when the volcano dusted six states with ash and killed dozens of people.

"It looks like an atom bomb," an observer in a U.S. Forest Service plane radioed. "It's very, very black... It's still booming, it's really booming."

"It's a major eruption," said Pete Rowley, a U.S. Geological Survey geologist.

Bank rate drops again

Bank rate drops again

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Allan MacEachern says Thursday's drop of more than half a percentage point in the Bank of Canada's trend-setting bank rate "is not a sign the recession is worsening in Canada."

"I believe it indicates the decline in interest rates in the U.S. and the strengthening of the Canadian dollar," he said in an interview.

It could also mean a drop in borrowing rates to consumers, although commercial lenders made no announcements Thursday.

While the bank rate dropped to 11.25 per cent from 11.81 per cent a week earlier in Canada, the Federal Reserve Board in the United States lowered its key lending rate a full percentage point to 11 per cent.

Opposition critics Sinclair Stevens for the Progressive Conservatives and Bob Rae for the New Democrats said they believe the Canadian decline should have been larger, given the sharp drop in the U.S.

Union head booted

VANCOUVER (CP) — B. Donnelly, president of the 10,000-member T-el communications Workers Union for the last six years was ousted Thursday in an election won by union business agent Bill Clark.

Clark said one of his objectives as president will be to develop new strategies to deal with economic pressure on B.C. Telephone Co., which would include several alternatives to an allout strike.

Donnelly will return to his former position as a business agent, which he held from 1970 until 1974, after winning Clark's spot by acclamation in elections during the union's annual convention.

Union secretary-treasurer Don Bremner retained his post, also by acclamation.

The union is currently in conciliation with B.C. Tel for a new contract to replace the one that expired Dec. 31.

Donnelly declined comment on the election.

Local businessmen get a look at logging

By CARLA WILSON
Herald Staff Writer
Twinriver Timber Ltd.
gave Terrace
businessmen an inside look at the local logging industry Thursday.
The Terrace and District Chamber of Commerce went on an all-day bus tour of Twinriver Woodlands Division of Canadian Cellulose
Company Ltd. (CanCel)

on Thursday.
The first stop was one of the five reloading areas for logs for Twinriver.
Dave Gardiner, forestry and engineering manager of Twinriver, organized the excursion and explained the purposes of the machinery and methods
he showed the chamber.
CanCel received the first tree farm license (TFL) in B.C. about 30 years ago, Gardiner said.

The TFL covers approximately two and a half million acres.
Most of their timber is hemlock and balsam, it was first logged in the 1950's, he said.
Gardiner led the group
to an area in the forest
where a grapple yarder was transporting logs.
This machine is a self-contained system and is controlled by tensions on its cables, said Gardiner.

The advantage to it is that it reduces manning requirements and a chokerman isn't needed,
he said.
The land that was being cleared of logs will be left to natural regeneration.
The supply of seedlings for reforestation is so low their company has to import them from the United States but they cannot get as many as they would like, he said.

The problem of backlog techniques used are
is another concern of CanCel, he said. There is land which should have been reforested in the past, however the lack of seedlings prevented this.
The tour moved to a reload area on the Nass River. Logs are formed into booms and taken down the river to the pulp mill, said Gardiner.

The machinery and
techniques used are unique to coastal logging, he said. Cable systems are not used much in the interior.
CanCel has about 900,000
acres of mature timber and about 220,000 acres of immature timber. The oldest of the immature timber is about 25 years old, he said.

because the timber was too dense and not mer-chantable," he said.
The trip finished with a visit to the native Indian school in New Aiyansh and a tour of the Twinriver shop in Terrace.

Central B.C. uses cables to transport logs because of the rough terrain. Here logs are piled up for preliminary sorting before they go to a reload area and then to a pulp mill or a sawmill.

Broadcasters burned by McGeer's actions

OTTAWA (CP) — Private
Canadian broadcasters say
Pat McGeer, British Columbia's communications minister, is doing a great diservice by leading the public to believe it has the right to pick signals freely off American satellites.
In a letter to McGeer, released Thursday in Ottawa, the Canadian Association of Broadcasters says satellite television signals are private communications between program suppliers and U.S.

cable television companies which pay for the right to receive them.
The association also told McGeer that signals beamed into Canada by U.S. satellites constitute the worst kind of competition to Canadian television stations.
The broadcasters took issue with McGeer's recent statement that satellite signals should be treated no differently than regular television and radio signals.

McGeer has said anyone should be allowed to use satellite receiver antennae, known as earth stations, to pick up whatever satellite programs are available.
American stations relayed on U.S. satellites have no programming obligations in Canada, while Canadian stations have a costly burden placed on them to extend services, the broadcasters said.
They also told the minister they are not seeking protection against fair competition.

LIBRARY BROWSING

by ED CURELL and MARIA YOUNG

Having difficulty in choosing something to read? Why not come in and look through our collection.

Among the new books:
Princess Daisy by Judith Krantz, which is currently No.2
on MacLean's best seller fiction list. Krantz is the author of Scruples. Her second novel is about Daisy, daughter of Prince Stash Valensky, the White Russian polo player and hero of the Battle of Britain and his wife, the American film star, Francesca Vernon.

This romantic dream of a novel transports us from the palaces of St. Petersburg to the Venice of today: from the closely guarded enclaves of the Virginia Hunt Country to the elegance of the great homes of England. It is the story of a princess who loses her fortune, fights for independence, and then finds the freedom to face the truth and become herself.

Whip hand by Dick Francis is about Sid Halley who works as a private investigator in the horse racing world. Sid finds himself hunting an enemy who believes the best defence is brutal attack. Whip hand is not a novelization of the stories in the series, but is an entirely new separate work.

The diving hand by Christopher Bird explains the 500 year old mystery of dowsing. The art of searching for water, oil, minerals and other natural resources or anything lost, missing, or badly needed has intrigued people for years.
Bird has filled this book with exciting, documented stories, most of them illustrated with photographs and diagrams.

Plan and build more storage space by Peter Jones is filled with innovative ways to store everything in your home. It is ideal for the handyman who wants ideas in cabinet work and projects to work on around the home.

New Children's Books:
Child of the owl by Laurence Yep involves a twelve-year-old girl who knows little about her Chinese heritage and is sent to live with her grandmother in San Francisco's Chinatown. As she begins to understand the intricacies of these people she finds herself at home.

Model buildings and how to make them by Harvey Weiss will interest anyone who enjoys constructing things.
Whether you want to make a farmhouse, a town house, cale or dollhouse, all the basic instructions are included with plenty of photographs to help you design your model.

A young person's guide to ballet by Noel Streetfeild introduces the magical world of ballet. The book concentrates on the progress of two very real children, Anna and Peter, who are nine when the story starts and twelve when it finishes. It shows how the children learn basic steps, describes ballet stories, ballet films and ballet personalities of past and present.

About thirty records were added to our collection this week. Victim of love by Elton John, Flying colors - Trooper, Rust never sleeps - Neil Young and James Taylor's Greatest

OTHER VIEWS

From the DAILY NEWS
Prince Rupert

It was to be expected that once Skeena was reaffirmed as an NDP stronghold after a brief flirtation with the federal Liberals, the riding would be taken off the government's gift list. Such action was delayed during the brief Progressive Conservative tenure, but that hiatus is now passed, and the party is obviously over.

That point was brought solidly home recently with the revelation that a Queen Charlotte Island air rebate program, initiated to assuage anger over the Northland Navigation Subsidy withdrawal, has been cancelled. It seems, not only are we no longer going to receive gratuitous favors, but the government wants to take back as much as possible of what it has already contributed.

The move is poor politics. Any wily politician (and what other kind are there?) could have a field day with the implications of the cancellation.

The thing is that with ferry service to the Queen Charlotte Islands imminent, the federal government would only have had to maintain the program for another half year at the outside. Judging from reported annual costs of the program in the past three years, it would have meant an expenditure of between $17,000 and $20,000. The transport officials could have made a big deal out of the fact they were going to maintain the rebate program until the ferry started in the fall, showering themselves with praise while simultaneously putting pressure on province.

Instead they're liable to end up with considerably more than $20,000 worth of bad publicity.

COMMENT

By TONY ATHERTON
Prince Rupert Daily News

If the Liberals had hired consultants to come up with the best way of alienating the largest number of Skeena riding constituents with the least amount of effort, they couldn't have come up with anything more effective than the cancellation of the Queen Charlotte Island air fare subsidy.

It's not a large amount - $10 on a round trip - and the Islands 6,000-odd residents are not an overly-large proportion of the riding's total populace, but the move is a heavy-handed reminder that the pork has drained from the barrel now that we no longer have a representative seated on the government's side of the house.

In 1976, a red-faced Iona Campagnolo was trying to pour oil on stormy constituency waters after the withdrawal of a $4 million subsidy to Northland Navigation Ltd. for regular freight and passenger service to the Queen Charlotte Islands, even going so far as threatening to quit her brand-new cabinet post if subsidies were not reintroduced.

During the months after the subsidy cancellation, relations between Campagnolo and cabinet colleague Otto Lang, then Minister of Transport, were strained at best. It was Lang, strong-willed, high profile, and respected by the prime minister, who engineered the subsidy withdrawal. It's to Iona's credit that she remained equally resolute about the needs of her constituents, although what she (and more importantly, the B.C. government) settled for was, in the end, less than what was required.

The air fare rebate program was the government's initial peace offering. It gave Iona something tangible to point to while promising that a marine subsidy program would be negotiated with the provincial government.

The ferry pace was announced in April 1977: an $8 million annual subsidy to the B.C. government adjusted each year to the Vancouver consumer price index. What the agreement lacked was specifics: the province was given almost unlimited jurisdiction over how the subsidy was to be distributed. The only mention of Queen Charlotte Island service was oblique, binding the province to providing "appropriate passenger service as soon as reasonably possible, establishing effective links on the coast between communities and principal air and water service."

The province's answer to that obscure reference was a subsidized freight service on RivTow barges, doing absolutely nothing to improve passenger transportation. So when the time came for reconsideration of air rebate scheme in 1978 and 1979, Ottawa, bending an ear to its comely Minister of Fitness, was convinced of the political expedience of retaining the program.

This is the first opportunity the government has had to reconsider the program since Ms. Campagnolo's passing, and it has certainly wasted no time relegating it to the scrap heap. But then, to add insult to injury, the transport mandarins have tried to slip the cancellation by without anyone noticing including members of the opposition. When the withdrawal of a program affecting a hefty slice of the constituents in a riding is orchestrated without a general announcement, or even informing the riding's official representative something's wrong.

It gets worse. Not only was no announcement made, but the letters that were supposed to be issued to passengers telling them not to apply for the rebate, have been delayed for nearly two months. And the reason? There was a problem getting the letters translated into French.

Now, I don't know if that's just been made up by some enthusiastic junior in Transport's PR department (maybe it's a standard-issue excuse in Ottawa), but real or imagined, such justification can only inflame bitter sentiments in a part of the country already looking askance at bilingualism.

Report from the legislature

By BILL BENNETT

There has been a certain amount of controversy lately about the use of dish antenna to receive television signals from communications satellites. There have even been some suggestions that a decision by Dr. Patrick McGeer, B.C.'s Minister of Universities, Science and Communications, to set up such an antenna at the legislature is illegal.

Let me first of all say that we would not as a government, break the law, nor would any minister of this government knowingly break the law.

Dr. McGeer advises me that the interpretation he has received on the particular federal act is that he is doing nothing illegal.

Now, if it is the view of the federal government and the federal minister of communications, Francis Fox, that what Dr. McGeer is doing is against the law the federal government would presumably move to require him to cease and desist.

But, if such a course were to be followed, we would expect that they would move to deal in the same way with other individuals who have such devices, not only in British Columbia but all across this country. We would expect the federal government to be even handed.

I think, really, the best thing the federal government could do, would be to clarify the law. Because as it now stands it is unclear. Federal officials are suggesting the minister is breaking the law. But the minister assures me that in his interpretation he is not.

If, indeed the federal position is that the operation of dish antennas is illegal, then we would hope that they take immediate action to clarify the matter.

Because what it is doing is putting into jeopardy Canadian citizens, particularly in remote communities, and we have many of them in British Columbia, who rely on television for some relief from isolation.

I would certainly expect that the government of Canada cares enough about those citizens to remove this uncertainty from over their heads.

We happen to think that the air waves should be free to individual citizens. We recognize that if there are commercial aspects involved we are faced with a different question. But in cases where it is individuals setting up receivers or groups of individuals doing it on a non-profit basis there is no reason for government to interfere so far as we can see.

There is too much government interference right now in what the individual may - or may not do. And for faceless federal bureaucrats to dictate what free individuals in a free country may view on their television sets, seems to us absolutely unreasonable.

This is a matter of principle. And, in our view the federal communications minister rather than threatening to make personal legal mores again individual Canadians, should be moving to clarify the law for all Canadians.

If the law is such that people in outlying areas of the province are deprived of a major source of not only entertainment but of learning, then the law should be changed to ensure that they have the right to free access to it.

Dr. McGeer's actions aren't something he had done on a whim.

The 3.8 meter dish and associated electronic equipment, which are manufactured in Canada, are an example of what Canadian technology can produce to provide television entertainment and communications to isolated communities throughout the world.

Canada's Anik satellites, developed under the auspices of the federal Department of Communications, can provide services all across Canada as well as to a good portion of the United States. Similarly, American satellites can provide alternate services in Canada.

Dr. McGeer has installed the earth station to show what people throughout British Columbia and many other parts of Canada could see using similar installations.

The television signals are technically far superior to what many people receive off air from local rebroadcast transmitters.

Dr. McGeer will also be installing a 1.8 meter dish which will receive the educational programming originating at BCIT and currently being received at locations throughout the province. On that same installation, the experimental project whereby two standard broadcast channels are carried on one satellite channel will be received.

This is Canadian technology at work. Satellite receiving equipment is an industry which could provide employment and manufacturing in the future. It is a clean, high technology industry, the products of which are exportable throughout the world.

Through the recently developed Discovery Parks concept, manufacturers will find a favourable environment and encouragement from the provincial government to pursue the necessary research and development to improve the quality and reduce the cost of future TRVO equipment.

This is what Dr. McGeer had to say about the federal position:

"It is my opinion, upon studying the act, that the average citizen should not be asked to apply for a licence. The satellite dish operates in a comparable fashion to a radio or television antenna and therefore should qualify as a 'radio apparatus'. The DOC and CRT have defined all satellite dishes as 'broadcasting undertakings' whether or not they were installed by cablevision operators. Since it is our intention to receive only 'broadcasting' signals, then this antenna should be exempt from any licence requirements as specified under section 3 (3) of the Radio Act Canada. To be doubly sure that the U.S. signals received by our dish are intended for our personal use if we do not rebroadcast them, our ministry has been contacting the U.S. originators to determine their intention."

I earnestly hope the federal government will make every effort to assist us in providing, as fully as we can, these entertainment and educational opportunities to British Columbians.

Surely the Canadian identity is not so fragile that it needs government coddling to the extent that we must shut our citizens away from the opportunity to see for themselves what our neighbors in the United States are saying and doing.

In the end, of course, the issue is quite simple. It is freedom of information, the right of our citizens to see and hear what they like, without government interference.

OTTAWA OFFBEAT

JACKSON

Ottawa. - He hasn't been in the business as long as New Democratic veteran Stanley Knowles, - nobody since Dief has - but New Brunswick's Conservative MP and former Minister of State for Transport Robert Howie was every bit as effective, and perhaps a shade more poetic and graceful, in pleading the cause of the pensioners.

He was supporting the Trudeau government's bill providing an extra $35 monthly per household for pensioners below the poverty line and drawing the income supplement, itself a sign that their life has become a cruel joke.

Another cruel joke, Robert Howie reminded the House, for the deprived aged without any savings or income of their own, had become the moving lines of poet Robert Browning:

"Grow old along with me
The best is yet to be
The last of life, for which the first was made."

That was a favorite quotation for former Liberal Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent, when "Uncle Louie" was fighting the losing 1957 election, and having offered a $6 monthly increase in the then relatively new old age pension, became nationally known - courtesy of Dief - as leader of "The six buck gang."

Robert Browning, agreed Mr. Howie, like old "Uncle Louie" had a "wonderful idea," but it was not to be.

If the elderly did save in their productive years, inflation, to which uncontrolled federal spending and excessive "me-first" wage demands have largely contributed, had wiped out many of them.

Statistics Canada calculates that the 1949 dollar - once the valuation base or measuring stick for purchasing power - by 1954 had shrunk to 88 cents; to 79 cents in 1959; to 72 cents in 1965; and to 36 cents in 1977.

If Stats-Can knows what the 1949 dollar now is worth in 1980, it hasn't said - perhaps it doesn't dare for fear of creating a crisis of confidence.

From that perspective, Robert Howie viewed the aging.

"In more difficult times than we enjoy," he related, "they created for us a much better way of life than they ever had."

"They did it with a lot of hard work and a measure of self-sacrifice."

"And today, hundreds of thousands of them live out worried lives in want and fear; not sharing in any fair or decent measure the prosperity their work and sacrifice did so much to create."

What to do about it?

Well, for one thing, Mr. Howie would change the base of indexing the old age pension from the consumer price index to a special "basket" of absolute basics for the aged, "food, heat, and living accommodation."

And with luck, he added, they might have "a bit left for clothing."

Cost of these essentials of life rise; he has calculated, much faster and more regularly than the wide variety of goods and services covered by the broadly based consumer price index.

His idea then: apply the indexing for pensions where it counts - on food, housing, heat and clothing - and forget about the cars, the movies, the holiday trips, the move-up-in-the-world homes, the smokes and other luxuries at least some of the younger and still workable Canadians enjoy.

The basing of indexing on the consumer price index does nothing but "average down" cost-of-living increases in pensions.

Mr. Howie spilled out a dozen ideas. Among them:

Some way of nationalizing indexing of public service pensions with retirement income in the private sector.

Ideally, he'd like to match them because the disparity between indexed public service pensions and not-or-partially indexed private pensions has been causing increasingly intense dissatisfaction and protest.

There are organized groups springing up, some of them well-funded, which are hammering governments for forcing the usually unindexed Canadian, working to build up a pension, or already drawing one, to shell out for the income-and-pension-protected public employee.

The thoughtful Conservative MP from York-Sunbury is working a lot of his ideas into bills which sooner or later will reach the floor of the Commons.

More internal fighting

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolution plunged deeper into chaos today after his guardsmen opened fire on tens of thousands of leftists in one of the bloodiest clashes since the shah was ousted 17 months ago. Meanwhile, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said, "The American hostages can go to hell!"

Moslem militants blasted the brawling crowd with tear gas and automatic weapons when it neared the iron gates of the occupied U.S. Embassy in Tehran, where at least some of the American hostages are still believed held.

The official Pars news agency said "shots fired in the air" during Thursday's fighting left two dead and 10 injured. Leftists said about 300 persons were hurt and at least one killed during the three-hour battle between Khomeini-loyalists and members of the People's Mujahadeen, or Warriors, Iran's largest leftist opposition group.

Witnesses said the fighting began when Khomeini supporters, armed with sticks and stones, tried to force their way into a rally of about 100,000 Mujahadeen at Tehran's Amjadiyeh stadium, down the street from the occupied embassy.

Fighting between the two groups quickly spread into the street between the stadium and the embassy. Witnesses said Khomeini's revolutionary guardsmen opened fire in an attempt to disperse the rampaging mobs.

As the crowd swirled near the embassy, Moslem militants within the compound put up sandbag barricades at the gates and others opened fire on the demonstrators from rooftops inside the building.

Witnesses said most of the injured were hit by gunfire, apparently from the guardsmen and the militants. Although the militants claim to have dispersed most of their 53 hostages to locations outside Tehran to prevent another U.S. rescue effort, they continue to hold the sprawling embassy compound and U.S. officials believe at least some of the Americans are still inside. The hostages today began their 223rd day in captivity.

The Mujahadeen called the rally to protest alleged intimidation of opposition groups by the Khomeini regime and the loss of human rights in Iran since the revolution that deposed shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in January 1979. The leftists were a key element in the anti-shah revolution, but have since run afoul of Khomeini's Islamic regime.

Only last Tuesday, Khomeini went on nationwide radio and television to deny internal differences which he said were creating chaos in Iran and threatening his revolutionary regime.

KHOMEINI...

...losing control

Thursday's fighting was the worst clash between Khomeini's forces and the leftists since April 19, when leftists began a week-long revolt on Iranian college campuses to protest an attempt by Moslem militants to purge them from the embattled country's universities. More than a score were reported killed in that week of fighting.

The latest clash came as the government announced it had smashed a military plot to topple Khomeini and return the shah to power. Tehran Radio said the alleged plotters were from an army unit based in Piranshahr, a town near the tense border with Iraq. The radio said at least six army officers and enlisted men had been arrested and would be tried next week.

Meanwhile, Ghotbzadeh told an Austrian TV team that interviewed him in Oslo, Norway, that the deadlock over the U.S. captives "has taught me not to make statements about the freeing of the hostages." He was visibly irritated over the media's interest in the fate of the captives, and got so furious during the interview that he said, "To hell with the American hostages!"

He complained the hostage issue overshadowed everything in the media's eyes, including the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. "Afghanistan is bleeding, and all people think of is some American hostages," Ghotbzadeh said.

Ghotbzadeh, in Oslo to attend a conference of the Socialist International, denied the socialist group was trying to mediate the release of the hostages. But Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky, a key member of GHTOBZADEH...

...has problems

the organization, said a tentative negotiating play has been formulated.

Kreisky, who met privately Thursday with the Iranian foreign minister, told a Swedish news agency, "There is a plan for how we will act in further discussions." He did not elaborate and there was no immediate comment from Tehran or Washington.

Afghan gov't showing split

NEW DELHI (AP) — Rival political factions in Afghanistan's Marxist leadership are reported "fighting like two crazy dogs," as Soviet and Afghan army units tighten security around Kabul, a city awash with rumors of an impending coup and possible new attacks by Moslem guerrillas, reports reaching here said.

An Afghan scholar who arrived here Thursday reported the power struggle in the Afghan capital between the government's rival Parcham and Khalq factions.

He said five Parchamites, supporters of President Babrak Karmal, and four Soviet citizens have been killed in recent days at the Mikrorayon apartment development used by Soviet advisers in Kabul. One of the Russians was hacked to pieces, said the scholar who asked not to be identified.

Another source said 23 Parchamites have been assassinated in their homes, on roads and near their offices.

The usually reliable informant said the Parcham faction also is a major target of the Sama rebels out to avenge the death of their leader, guerrilla chieftain Abdul Majid Kalakani.

Kabul Radio reported last week that Kalakani, captured early in the year, had been executed after being convicted of terrorism by a revolutionary court.

Several sources said rumors of coming leadership changes in Kabul, or a possible new coup, have intensified in recent days.

The Soviets have poured an estimated 85,000 troops into Afghanistan since December to support the Karmal government, the latest in a string of pro-Moscow regimes that have come to power in Kabul. AntiCommunist rebels have been fighting Marxist government for the last two years.

Balanced budget said just a hope

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, four weeks behind schedule, has adopted a $613.6-billion 1981 balanced budget. But many policymakers believe the deepening U.S. recession is already pushing the tentative spending plan back into the red.

Besides projecting the first balanced federal budget in 12 years, the approved spending plan allocates $153.7 billion for defence, $3.2 billion more than President Carter requested. That figure contains the biggest peacetime military increase ever, a jump of $18 billion over the current year.

Partly to pay for that increase, the budget recommends cuts in an array of domestic programs, including public service jobs, food stamps, Saturday mail, mass transit, grants to local police departments, state revenue sharing and urban aid.

Moon rising fast in Edmonton

By SYLVIA STROJEK
 EDMONTON (CP) — It looks like the sun won't be setting on Edmonton Eskimo quarterback Warren Moon — at least not for another 10 years.

Moon, 23, has signed 10 consecutive one-year contracts with the Canadian Football League club, committing him through the 1989 season.

The signing, announced at a news conference Thursday night, laid to rest rumors the hero of the 1978 Rose Bowl game would play out his option this season and try his luck in the National Football League.

"The management has been very generous to me," Moon said about his commitment with the Eskimos. He refused to disclose how much money is involved in the deal but said: "I'm satisfied with it."

Eskimos' coach Hugh

Campbell said: "All of us are very pleased that Warren has elected to stay in Edmonton. It's an example of a great commitment to one city."

Campbell did not add the signing was also an example of how the Grey Cup champion Eskimos are staying ahead of other CFL teams, several of whom have lost key players to the National Football League in the United States in the last few months.

Moon, 6-2 and 200 pounds, has been splitting quarterbacking duties with veteran Tom Wilkinson for the last two years and is Wilkinson's heir-apparent as starter.

Campbell called him "a great young man who can help our team" and said he feels Moon's presence will influence future players because they will come to Moon for advice.

Moon said he decided to stay with the club because "there's a lot of opportunity for success in playing with the Eskimos."

Winners known in girl's minor softball

The final three games of the 1980 Terrace Girls' Minor Softball Association season were played Thursday night at Agar Park.

The last three Squirt division games of the year saw B.C. Government Employee's Union beat Vic Froese Trucking 8-7, Chris's Janitorial Service drop a 14-6 decision to Bob's Swingers, and All Seasons' double Westend Food Mart 8-4.

Vic Froese Trucking emerged as the Squirt division winners over the course of the season. Pee wee division winners were New Quadra Travel, and Bantam division champions were: Moose Lodge.

The division champions were decided on the basis of the performance over the regular season. No playoffs will be played.

The minor girls' softball association will be holding a tournament over the weekend, with teams from New Aiyansh, Kitimat, Kitwano and Hazelton participating. A total of 19 teams will be present for the games, to take place at Agar Park in Terrace.

All local teams will be participating in the tournament, joined by Squirt level teams from Aiyansh, Pee wee teams from Kitimat, and Juvenile teams from Kitwano and Hazelton.

Games begin at 9 a.m. Saturday and then again at 9 a.m. Sunday. Final games are scheduled to begin at 2:15 p.m. Sunday afternoon.

King's show was a good time

Eddie Feigner's fastball may not be as fast as it used to be, and his knees may be slowing him down a little, but he's a showman and can still entertain.

He proved that Thursday night in front of packed bleachers at Riverside Park in Terrace.

The dropping balls, the behind the back pitches and the four-step windup had members of Williams Moving and SKB Salvage guessing most of the evening, and even though the Allstars hit off him early, after he got wound up a bit later on in the game Feigner's pitches got a little harder to hit.

Feigner said before the show "Don't worry about the score, it's already been taken care of." It was a show, though, and from the warmup until the pitching show after the game most of the activities were set up for entertainment.

The Allstars went along with some of the gags that Feigner and the other three members of the Court pulled, like the one where he throws the ball behind his back — right into his mitt.

Feigner's specialty pitches were still effective, and he threw lots of strikes behind his back and even a few from second base.

A good time was had by the fans, and, apparently, by the teams on the field.

Sittler predicts revolt

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Darryl Sittler says Toronto Maple Leaf players and their fans would revolt if team owner Harold Ballard keeps him from attending training camp in September.

Ballard was quoted Wednesday as saying Sittler was cancerous to the National Hockey League team and would not be invited to camp.

"Sittler will never wear a Maple Leaf uniform again," Ballard said after the team announced the trade of goaltender Mike Palmater to Washington Capitals.

But Sittler said Thursday he intends to attend training camp.

"You know Harold," he said. "I've heard him say similar things about other players. You just have to take everything he says with a grain of salt."

"It doesn't make sense to me to keep your leading scorer for the past eight years out of the lineup."

Phil Esposito of New York Rangers, president of the National Hockey League Players Association, said he wasn't sure if Ballard could legally ban Sittler from training camp.

Susan Ewart, Red Cross area consultant for the Water Safety Service in the Northwest, gives instruction on rescue breathing to two youngsters.

Drownings aren't necessary

Drowning statistics in B.C. are depressing.

The Canadian Red Cross Society's statistics say that one person will drown every two days in B.C. this summer.

The number also say that one out of every two of those people will be children.

"That's pretty frightening, especially when you consider that less than ten percent of the Canadian population have an adequate knowledge of artificial respiration," said Susan Ewart, area consultant for the water safety service of the Red Cross.

Ewart, who is based in Prince George, passed through Terrace last week to promote the Red Cross's water safety program. Although she is based in Prince George, Ewart is responsible for the northwestern area of the province. She will visit the Terrace area in the next few days to promote water safety and that bystanders do not know how to react helpfully or quickly.

"An individual lacking oxygen, in a situation like a drowning accident, for as long as five minutes still has a 25 per cent chance of survival if he gets oxygen," Ewart said. "An additional five minutes, though, will reduce that victim's chances to just one per cent. Therefore, reacting quickly cannot be emphasized enough."

Ewart added that if rescue breathing is begun within one minute of the accident, the chance of recovery is 98 per cent.

The Red Cross offers formal training to people who take their classes, but there are eight basic rules that, if followed quickly enough, will greatly help a person's chances of survival. "Although there are always exceptions to the rules, these eight points could save a person's life," Ewart said.

The eight points are:

1. The sooner rescue breathing is started, the greater the person's chance of recovery.

2. As long as the location is safe, do not try to move the victim. That can be done later, or by someone with training.

3. Make sure that the victim's mouth is empty, and that his windpipe, or airway, is clear and unobstructed.

4. With the victim lying on his back, open the victim's airway by lifting his neck with one hand and keeping the head on the ground with the other, thus giving the head a backward tilt.

5. Pinch the nostrils closed to prevent air leakage.

6. Seal your mouth over the victim's mouth and breath in.

7. Remove your mouth, release the nostrils, and allow the air to escape from the victim's lungs.

8. Continue repeating this procedure once every five seconds until the victim awakes or until someone qualified takes over.

Ewart emphasizes that the rescuer shouldn't stop even though he appears to be getting no response. The only person who can declare a person to be dead is a doctor, and if artificial respiration can be kept up, a victim may revive even after an hour or more.

"Drowning statistics are very depressing," Ewart said, "and they are made more so because almost every accident could have been avoided."

She is quick to point out that the number of drownings in Canada has been cut in half since the Red Cross began training people in 1946.

"I'm optimistic that if people will continue to show interest in the water safety programs being offered in this area at the Terrace and Kitimat pools, the number of drownings can be reduced even further."

Registration for swimming lessons at the Terrace pool start Saturday morning at 9 a.m. and run until 11:30 a.m. The next lesson set off at the Terrace pool starts on July 2.

Injuries have turned Montreal Expos around — in the right direction.

Despite a mounting string of assorted ills, the Expos are playing their best baseball of the season, thanks to a solid farm system that keeps turning up fine, young players.

The latest to help the Montreal cause are pitcher Charlie Lea and third baseman Brad Mills, who combined to help the National League East leaders beat San Diego Padres 9-1 Thursday night for their ninth straight victory.

Lea scattered eight hits over eight innings for his first major league victory and Mills had three singles and batted in three runs.

Lea, recalled from the Expos' American Association team in Denver on Wednesday, was a last-minute replacement for David Palmer, who came up with a tender elbow. Mills, called up from the same Denver club last weekend to replace the injured Larry Parrish, entered the game as a pinch hitter in the fifth inning.

In other NL games, New York beat Los Angeles 6-5 and Pittsburgh outscored Cincinnati 10-8. In the American League, Detroit whipped Minnesota 8-4, Milwaukee routed Texas 8-1, Baltimore stopped Seattle 4-1 and Boston hammered California 13-2.

Lea, 23, allowed only one extra-base hit in his major league debut, striking out four and walking three. The right-hander lost his shutout in the eighth on Dave Winfield's sacrifice fly.

Mets 6 Dodgers 5 Pitchers Dave Goltz and Bob Castillo and shortstop Bill Russell contributed run-scoring throwing errors, helping New York defeat Los Angeles. The Dodgers built a 5-0 lead in the first three innings with Dusty Baker driving in three runs with his 14th homer in the third.

But, with the help of the errors, the Mets came back with four runs in the fifth and two more in the sixth.

Pirates 10 Reds 6 Mike Easler hit for the cycle and Dale Berra slugged a three-run homer to lead Pittsburgh past Cincinnati.

MIKE EASLER... ..homer helps Pirates

cincinnati. Easler also drove in his eighth and ninth runs in the last five games and boosted his home run total to 10 for the season.

Tigers 8 Twins 4 Champ Summers hit a pair of two-run homers and Alan Trammell drove in two runs with a bases-loaded double in the sixth inning to help Detroit beat Minnesota.

Summers's first home run came in the fourth inning and tied the score at 4-4. He hit his second with one out in the seventh for the Tigers' final runs.

Brewers 8 Rangers 1 Sixto Lezcano drove in three runs, two with a double, in Milwaukee's four-run eighth inning and Sal Bando's RBI single capped a three-run first as the Brewers routed Texas.

Mike Caldwell, 6-2, scattered seven hits for the Brewers, who have won 14 of their last 19 games.

Orioles 4 Mariners 1 Benny Ayala and Ken Singleton each hit two-run homers as Baltimore defeated Seattle behind Steve Stone's six-hitter.

Ayala slugged his homer in the fourth following a single by Singleton off Rick Honeycutt, 7-3. Singleton's 10th homer of the year came in the eighth with Kiko Garcia on base.

Red Sox 13 Angels 2 Butch Hobson knocked in four runs with two homers and Jim Rice and Dave Stapleton also homered to lead Boston over California.

Caps respond to coaching

By The Canadian Press
Tony Walters was back in a familiar role as coach of the Whitecaps Thursday night and the Vancouver club responded with a return to the pattern of play that brought them the 1979 Soccer Bowl as they downed Toronto Blizzard 2-1 in North American Soccer League play.

Walters resumed his role as head coach, a position he held the last two years, Tuesday when Bob McNab was fired.

Walters received some familiar support from striker Trevor Whymark, who scored two goals, his fifth and sixth of the season.

Whymark's first goal a short, looping shot over Toronto netminder Tony Chursky broke a 1-1 deadlock with 3:17 left in the game.

The win improved the defending league champion's record to six wins and eight losses in the National Conference West and lifted Vancouver into second place behind Seattle Sounders. The Whitecaps had lost their previous two games.

Toronto's record dropped to five wins and eight losses in the National Conference East.

Whymark's first goal in front of 14,777 spectators in the sixth minute of play came on a lazy crossing pass from midfielder Gerry Gray.

The Blizzard tied the score at 1-1 on a goal by Jim Bone.

Artes 3 Roughnecks 0

Eis Fernando scored two goals to lead the Aztecs to a 3-0 victory over Tulsa.

Fernando scored at 7:55 and 35:39 and was assisted by Gary Etherington on both goals. Bob Sibbald added an assist on the second goal. Javier Aguirre scored the other Aztecs goal, an unassisted effort at 89:58.

Salvation Army: A church with discipline

By KEITH ALFORD
Special to the Herald

Captain David Thompson is a big man with a stock of curly brown hair. Thompson looks a lot like a lineman on a football team. He speaks with a strong voice full of drive and conviction, and his thoughts all full of practicality and realism as well as faith. He is the Commander of the Salvation Army Church, 4637 Walsh Avenue, Terrace.

In London, England, in 1865, William Booth, a Methodist minister, began preaching in the slums of the East End of that city. He wanted to continue with his work there, but his church disagreed, so he left it and founded The Christian Mission. In 1878, the name was changed to The Salvation Army, which now has a presence in 58 countries with approximately 16,000 officers and cadets. Thompson describes the Salvation Army as both a denomination and an organization. True to its name, it has a military format. It is headed by an elected General with its international headquarters in London. The next division is a territory.

Canada and Bermuda combined are one territory headed by a Commission located in Toronto. Northern British Columbia constitutes a Division (from Port Simpson to Prince George) with its headquarters in Prince Rupert led by a Commander. Terrace is called a Corp with Kitimat as an outpost since there is no Salvation Army Church located there and it is headed by Thompson.

Our local congregation has 107 adherents, 63 of whom are under 16. There are also 23 members or "soldiers" who are entitled to wear the uniform.

Anyone can become an adherent, for full membership one must feel a commitment to Christ and be "born again". A pledge card is signed, called "The Articles of War", and a sort of "swearing in" ceremony takes place. Baptism is not part of this ceremony.

All soldiers (full members) must be total abstainers from both alcohol and nicotine. All is on a volunteer basis, the uniformed soldiers are not paid to perform their various services, and Thompson stresses that there is no "push" to become either a soldier or "orders" given to undertake a particular sort of work after that.

The local congregations have a Corp Council which is made up of members of the church and which advises on the ministry and business of the church; but which has no actual authority. The Captain of the church has veto power over it, and the physical property belongs to the Salvation Army International, which means, for instance, that an addition for a Sunday School can only be authorized by the Commissioner in Toronto.

The Salvation Army has two mottos. One is marked by the "S.S." on every uniform — "Saved to Serve". The other is Booth's personal slogan, "Soup, Soap, and Salvation". The latter is more than just alteration. It is a short means of expressing an entire philosophy.

Thompson explains that first you feed a person to restore his physical strength. Then you get him cleaned up to restore his dignity. Then you offer him salvation to restore his soul. "We are not the Red Cross," says Thompson, "we believe that salvation is as necessary as the soup and soap."

Captain David Thompson is the local officer

With such an orientation, it is not surprising to find the Salvationists heavily involved in community life.

Besides the church services and the Sunday School, it offers a "Home League", which is a women's group that is open to any woman, those that attend the Salvation Army services, those that attend another church, and those that attend no church at all. It is involved in planned activities around education, crafts, films, devotionals, and fun nights.

The Salvation Army is one of the very few churches in our town which will conduct marriages for non-members.

Thompson sees this as a way of making contacts for future ministry. But once again, there is no "push" to join his church, he just wants people to know that he's there if they need him. He is also one of the very few clergymen here who is permitted to celebrate marriages for divorced persons, though the papers must first go to Toronto to be approved.

He is heavily involved in counselling. Our interview at his home was interrupted by phone calls from people who found themselves in difficulty.

The Salvationists operate a Thrift Store, which Thompson has just re-evaluated according to his practical side, and it is now under new management. It is under the charge of a woman who is paid a very small honorarium to insure that it is indeed open at the times it is supposed to be and to attempt to break even on the rent the store must pay. "It is not meant to be a profit making store," says Thompson, "but we have a responsibility to the community to see that it's there and a responsibility to just cover its cost."

One of the things the Army is well known for is its Christmas hampers. "The people of Terrace are extremely generous here," he says.

Indeed, many other churches donate to the Army for it to perform this service. About $2,000 worth of turkeys, as well as canned goods, and toys (for four to five-year-olds) are distributed. Even the cab company donates some of its time for deliveries.

Thompson's practical side is shown here also. These hampers are family oriented, "especially for the kids", and he is attempting to insure that only those who are in "real need" receive them. Applications are sometimes made, with authorization to check financial records, as a result where two years ago 150 were given out, this year the number was about 95.

Thompson is attempting to eliminate some of the people who seem to have always gotten them, but you didn't really need them. On the other hand, he is also seeking out those whose pride may stop them from asking for them when they would be appreciated. Any monies left over from the kettle drive goes to other welfare work during the year.

Thompson's ministry extends far beyond our town too. Should someone want treatment for alcoholism, he can arrange for that person to get either to Vancouver or Prince George to the Army's centres there. He can also arrange stays at the Army's unwed mother's home in Vancouver.

Looking for someone who is missing in another city, Thompson can contact the Salvation Army there for assistance. The same if a person needs visiting somewhere across the country.

Closer to home, he is involved in probation work, where offenders are sentenced to so many hours of community work. He can provide refreshment for fire fighters during a long blaze, if he knows one is going on. His biggest problem is finding those in need.

"Just let me know and I'll be there." If he is ill, his wife, Gladys, can carry on. All the wives of officers are ordained also, with the full powers of the clergy, both legally and for the church. The Army was one of the earliest forerunners of the feminist movement.

Thompson says that the hallmark of the Army is people, others. And he's quite excited about a ministry to the pubs he and a soldier have just undertaken. Through it, they are making a lot of contacts and going out to find some of those who are in need.

It is appropriate that this article is appearing today, Friday the 13th. The Thompsons were married that day. They came to Terrace last year on Friday, the 13th in July. But Thompson is a man who makes his own luck, through his drive and his faith.

Being without MSA to take care of the bills!

Break a leg at Mount Baker or catch a bug in Hawaii and your hospital expenses alone could run up to $400 a day. The problem is that your Provincial Government Health Insurance Plan pays only a portion of the cost.

That's why MSA Travel Protection, for less than a dollar a day, makes sense.

MSA Hospital and Medical Protection pays the extra expenses when you need care away from B.C.; medical, surgical and hospital expenses, air ambulance, emergency oral surgery, prescription drugs and more.

Attentive riders listen to Nick Holmes-Smith's instruction during a four-day riding clinic on skateboarding, roller skating and trampolining will be offered by internationally known experts, and tickets are now available for the Saturday night stage show in the Terrace arena. The above number is the one you should call for further details.

The Terrace Slumber Lodge has opened the doors on its new restaurant, which they are calling the Grand Trunk.

As might be expected, the decor of the restaurant is early railway, and the eatery has a new menu to accompany the motif.

Quite a few months of construction are now finished at the motel, and 30 new rooms and lobby renovations have brightened the old place up quite a bit.

Four Terrace residents and a person from Kitimat have received degrees from universities in B.C.

Brenda Hobbs got a

Bachelor of Science degree in nursing from the University of British Columbia. Brenda is currently working at the Skeena Health Unit in Terrace, but will be heading back to Vancouver in September to take a job at the new UBC Acute Care Hospital.

Linda Purschke, a former reporter at the Herald, was awarded her Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Victoria. Other Uvic graduates this year were Darryl Ritchie, who got his Bachelor of Fine Arts, Sigrid Leach, who got her Bachelor of Education degree, and Kitimat's Lori Milmine, who got her Bachelor of Science degree.

Skeena Junior Secondary School's annual dramatic presentation, The Prime Time Crime, will be performed at the R.E.M. Lee Theatre in Terrace tonight and next Saturday night by the members of the Skeena drama club, under the direction of teacher Brian Koven.

A mystery in the style of Agatha Christie, Prime Time Crime's two performances take place at 8 p.m. on the two nights.

This is the weekend that the Northwest Women's Festival takes place at the Hart Farm in Terrace.

The three-day event features workshops for women on topics that range from Women and Law to Women and Northern Tools.

Festivities and workshops start at 5 p.m. today and run until noon on Sunday.

The Filipino-Canadian Association of Terrace and Kitimat is sponsoring "Fiesta Filipiniana" a dinner dance featuring Philippine cuisine and entertainment on June 14, 1980.

The dinner-dance will be held at the Oddfellows Hall, 3222 Monroe St., Terrace, and will mark the association's debut in Terrace.

Folk dances, door prizes and other surprises will be featured, and after the warm welcome given, the association in Kitimat last year, the association is expecting another successful affair.

Tickets are available from New Quadra Travel in Terrace or call 635-7371 or 635-9615 for ticket information.

Friday the 13th makes the rounds at area theatres this coming week, and Bill Young, manager of the Tillicum Theatre in Terrace, makes his cinematic debut in Scavenger Hunt on Wednesday.

Friday the 13th is a fairly gory horror flick which is in Terrace at the Tillicum just in time for your scared-it-Friday the 13th. Restricted due to the large flows of blood that take over the screen frequently.

This one also plays at the Nechako Theatre in Kitimat Monday and Tuesday.

Sunday night Anne Bancroft's movie Fatso takes over from the red stuff. Completely concerned with food and eating, Fatso isn't for those faint-at-heart dieters who feel they have no willpower. Bob Haines leaves for a new position

Bob Haines, the vice-president of the Terrace and District Chamber of Commerce, resigned his position Tuesday.

Haines has lived in Terrace for almost two years and has worked on the executive of the Chamber of Commerce for about half of that time. He has been a member since he moved to Terrace.

The resignation was accepted, with regret, because Haines has worked hard for the Chamber of Commerce, pointed out a member. However, everyone wished him the best of luck in his new position.

Haines is leaving Terrace because of his work and said he's moving with mixed feelings after becoming so involved in the community.

Theater, composing, writing and painting are your natural milieu. You have a flair for self-expression and are community minded. Teaching, law and medicine may also appeal to you. Often, you are found in businesses allied with the arts. Jewelry, millinery, antiques and designing are fields which would appeal to your artistic instincts. Birthdate of: Edvard Grieg, composer.

FOR MONDAY, JUNE 16, 1980

A career opportunity to your liking. You may feel like you're in the driver's seat, though you'll work quietly, unobtrusively.

SAGITTARIUS

(Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)
A possible business trip comes up. News from friends at a distance. Join others at movie, concert or cultural activity.

CAPRICORN

(Dec. 22 to Jan. 19)
Minor work problems possible. It may be hard to concentrate on little things when your mind is on the big deal, the large venture.

AQUARIUS

(Jan. 20 to Feb. 18)
You want to get out — but where and with whom? Business interests at a distance are favored if you keep expectations reasonable.

PISCES

(Feb. 19 to Mar. 20)
Household chores and routine tasks may seem boring now. Others will help you out, though. P.M. favors bookkeeping and accounting matters.

YOU BORN TODAY are more academically inclined than the typical member of your sign. You are analytical and can succeed in mental endeavors. Writing, teaching, science, law and literature are some of the fields in which you'd find happiness. In business, you should ally yourself with progressive organizations. You dislike routine and need to be kept intellectually stimulated. Banking, advertising, architecture, music and painting are other areas which may appeal to you. You're more inclined to the professions than business.

"Open-Minded" Husband Letting Brains Fall Out

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1980 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I suppose you've had dozens of letters like this, but here goes: My wife of 18 years came to me about a month ago and said, "I've been in love with another man for a year and I want to be with him as much as I can, so I'm leaving you."

It turns out the guy is well-heeled, married and has a family. He isn't sure he wants to leave his family, but he can manage to get away from home about three nights a week, so my wife moved into their "love nest," which he provided.

I am now baching it with my teen-age son. My wife comes home every Friday and goes back on Sunday. She says she's not sure what she wants — it's still too soon to know. She claims she still cares for me and isn't sure she wants a divorce, but that she is happiest when she is with this other guy. I have tried to be open-minded about it, but it's tearing me up inside and my ego is down to zero. Any advice?
OPEN-MINDED

DEAR OPEN: Don't be so "open-minded" that your brains fall out. Give "Seesaw, Marjorie Daw" a deadline to decide which man she wants. Tell her you don't want a part-time wife. And whether or not there will be a divorce shall not be decided by her alone, because you may want to be free to fall in love with someone else. And be tough!

DEAR ABBY: I can't understand why my husband, who never thanks me for anything, always says "thank you" after a love session.

Somehow, I can't feel good about it. Am I wrong? We've been happily married almost 50 years.

PITTSBURGH
DEAR PITTSBURGH: Never question his thank-you, just accept and appreciate it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MY READERS: I found this lovely Irish prayer (author unknown) displayed prominently on the desk of Al Zitnick, the faithful Jewish "schleppercaun" who sorts the Dear Abby mail:

"Take time to work,
It is the price of success.
Take time to think,
It is the source of power.
Take time to play,
It is the secret of perpetual youth.
Take time to read,
It is the foundation of wisdom.
Take time to be friendly,
It is the road to happiness.
Take time to love and be loved,
It is the privilege of the gods.
Take time to share,
Life is too short to be selfish.
Take time to laugh,
Laughter is the music of the soul."

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Polyesters are looking better

TORONTO (CP) — To some women, polyester is a dirty word.

They immediately think of tacky, double-knit pantsuits, crimplene dresses and fabrics that blind with their shine.

But the days of cheap-looking, sleazy-feeling polyesters are over. Designers and manufacturers have suddenly discovered that polyester, rayon and acetate are not only practical, in many cases they can look as good as real cotton, linen, wool or silk.

The new synthetics crease less than natural fibres — pure linen and cotton can have all the appeal of an unmade bed — and are machine washable which keeps drycleaning costs down.

Oil-based polyesters (rayon is wood based) were invented in Britain in 1945 but are considered a post-war phenomenon. By 1963, they were being marketed in the U.S. by Du Pont under the Dacron label and in Britain as Terylene.

Then, polyesters were clammy, hot and shiny. And, says Toronto designer Hugh Garber, they reeked of plastic, they smelled cheap and they looked cheaper.

On the plus side, polyester, no matter how hideous, proved resistant to moths and mildew, was washable, could be drip-dried and easily "touch" ironed.

However, modern polyesters — especially those from Japan where technology has particularly advanced — are as different from those early doubleknits as chalk is from cheese.

Garber, who has a collection of 80-per-cent polyester and polyester-blends, says some of his wool-like acrylics and silk-like polyesters are as good as the real thing.

"I have some acrylics with a wool feeling that women allergic to wool like," he says. "And my polyesters look like silk but outperform it."

"With silk you sweat in the summer and freeze in the winter."

Garber thinks women are still snobs about polyesters because they're unaware of recent developments in the synthetic field.

This year hair will be dressed up for daytime and evening. Often, longer hair will be brushed smoothly and sleekly into chic swirls and folds at the front. Clairrol consultant Leslie Blanchard says haircolor should make a strong fashion statement for a total look of fashion in 1980.

Highland exports are selling well

LONDONDERRY, N.S. (CP) — As Scottish as pipe music and as highland as heather is the tradition in which Ed Langille and his wife turn out attire at their L. and N. Highland Outfitters.

Ed and Sandra work side by side almost every day to produce items of highland dress for export to the many parts of the world where Scots have settled.

The sporran, a leather purselike pouch worn at the front of the kilt, is made in 40 different models and from many materials, and Langille says a sporran is every bit as versatile as a woman's purse.

A former auto worker in St. Catharines, Ont., Langille says his Highland Outfitters operation "is the best thing I ever did."

"You have to think that it's not too many people who can do for a living what they learned in their spare time," he said in an interview at his home in this community 30 kilometres northwest of Truro.

"Little did I know when I picked up a chanter. It would change my whole life."

That was in 1960 when Langille was living in St. Catharines and he joined a local pipe band.

"At that time I was working on the assembly line at General Motors and everyone on the assembly line needed an outlet. By 1966 the band needed new bagpipes and the finances were very low so I decided to make one, but the one turned out to be three."

After the pipebags,

Langille decided to experiment with making sporrans and before long he had taught himself that trade and had 20 customers lined up for his work.
